

A.C.C. Dairy Enquiry.

Dear Sir,

Let me start by quoting Henry Covey "Free trade cheapens produce for the consumer by cutting the producers price. Protectionism cheapens produce for the consumer by enhancing the producers price." The point Covey was making that if farmer were paid a fair and just price for their produce they could avail themselves of the best technology available, being more efficient giving them the ability to produce more for less something free trade will never do.

Farmers are not beggars at the back door of the mansion begging for a few more crumbs while promising to work harder. It is the processors with their lopsided contracts designed to benefit Woolworths and Coles by enslaving the farmers. "Free trade benefit a few at the expense of the many" Henry Clay collective bargaining is nothing more than a group of farmers running around in circles going nowhere and achieving nothing purely sacrificing farmers.

What happened to free energy? Free energy is the very thing that drives the industry forward and allows the expansion and naturally flows through to farmers. In a regulated industry the free energy ranged from 3% - 5% per annum pretty good. When the industry was deregulated the free energy was transferred from the productive sector to the non-productive thus becoming useless hence the industry is in a systemic collapse.

Energy-flux density is a universal principle which we need to be in harmony with. The universe requires a continuing expansion of energy-flux density yet we have these so-called experts who tell us how we can cut this, cut that, to survive. Unfortunately reductionism like free trade has never had one success in the entire history of mankind on this planet. So why are we pursuing this stupidity just to fail? What we need is solutions like dump G.A.T.? W.T.O Free trade, Reregulate the industry legislate for Glass-Steagall

National Banking System so we create the credit to rebuild the physical economy.

Yours sincerely
Graeme Muldoon